How does Skills Gap Analysis work?

We typically begin by assessing procurement knowledge using our online assessment. We can then continue to carry out more in-depth probing to analyse an appropriate training and development starting point to bridge knowledge gaps.

Identify training needs

Competency levels are based on the knowledge and capabilities identified in the Global Standard for Procurement and Supply. A personalised report will then provide a structure for a personal development plan.

The benefits

- Benchmarking: Taking the data from all of those that have undertaken the online assessment allows us to measure performance against the average and best in class from all sectors
- Value: By assessing the gaps in your team's knowledge you can strategically target and prioritise training spend to get the most from your budget
- Knowledge: CIPS Skills Gap Analysis lets you see at-a-glance your procurement strengths and development needs, highlighting the stars of the future and assisting in the recruitment process
- Development: The results from the online competency assessment allows you to identify the people in your team who would benefit most from a targeted development programme.

CIPS Competency Assessment Tool

CIPS Competency Assessment Tool is an online questionnaire that will take approximately one and a half hours to two hours to complete.

There are 132 multiple choice questions across the 11 themes of the CIPS Global Standard in Procurement and Supply. For each theme there will be 12 questions split equally across the Operational, Managerial, Professional and Advanced Professional competency levels. At the end of each theme candidates will be required to give their answers a confidence rating.

The output of the competency assessment is a guide for employers of the strengths and development needs across the team, along with a personal report for individuals to help address their own development needs.
